

Claiming a patent on using frames to provide a consistent "feel" to navigating is like claiming a patent on using a printing press to produce paper packaging. Both are so obvious and elementary that it is not patentable.